ABSTRACT

A verification system for a procedure interface is generated by using formal

5   specifications of the procedure interface and generating test suites. The test suites are generated from the formal specifications and templates or skeletons which are used to generate an element of a verification system. The skeletons are generated based on decomposition of test suits.